Be It Resolved by the Legislature of the State of Florida:

Section 1. Official census for apportionment; definitions.—

(1) In accordance with Section 8(a), Article X of the State Constitution, the United States Decennial Census of 2010 is the official census of the state for the purposes of this joint resolution.

(2) The following delineation of representative and senatorial districts employs areas included within official county, voting tabulation district, tract, and block boundary descriptions used by the United States Department of Commerce, Bureau of the Census, in compiling the United States Decennial Census of 2010 in this state. The populations within these census geographic units are the population figures reported in the counts of the United States Decennial Census of 2010 provided to the state in accordance with Pub. L. No. 94-171.

(3) As used in this joint resolution, the term:

(a) "Block" describes the smallest geographic unit for which population was tabulated in the 2010 decennial census. Blocks are nested within tracts and within voting tabulation

20121176er

1480 districts. A block is identified by a four-digit integer that is 1481 unique within a tract but is not necessarily unique within a
1482 voting tabulation district.

1483 (b) "Tract" describes a relatively permanent statistical 1484 subdivision of a county updated by local participants prior to 1485 the 2010 decennial census. Tracts consist of whole blocks and 1486 are nested within counties. Tracts are identified uniquely
1487 within a county by an up to four-digit integer and may have an 1488 optional two-digit suffix.

1489 (c) "Voting tabulation district" describes a subdivision of
1490 a county established in Phase 2 of the 2010 Census Redistricting
1491 Data Program. Voting tabulation districts consist of whole
1492 blocks and are nested within counties. Voting tabulation
1493 districts subdivide counties in ways supervisors of elections
1494 determined are efficient for conducting elections and keeping
1495 communities whole. Voting tabulation districts are identified
1496 uniquely within a county by an up to four-digit integer.

1497 Section 2. Representative districts.—For the election of
1498 members to the House of Representatives of this state, the state
1499 is apportioned into 120 consecutively numbered, single-member,
1500 representative districts of contiguous territory, to be
1501 designated by such numbers as follows:

Description of Software, Data, and Criteria

Software Used to Create Plans

In July 2007, the Florida Senate started developing redistricting software. The Senate determined early on that the best and most affordable technology for maximizing public participation would be an open source web application.

In November 2009, the Senate demonstrated for Executive Staff of the U.S. Census Bureau a District Builder prototype built on open source technology (MapServer/PostgreSQL/Apache). That same year, the Senate demonstrated the prototype at National Conference of State Legislatures meetings. The “alpha” version of District Builder (with 2001-2002 redistricting data) was used for NCSL redistricting simulation exercises in Providence, Rhode Island, and Washington, D.C.

In November 2009, the Florida House of Representatives began development of its own web-based, available to the public, open source redistricting software. The software known as MyDistrictBuilder™ is built on a technology stack of Microsoft Silverlight, Bing Maps, and Azure cloud servers with software source code available on Microsoft CodePlex at <http://mydistrictbuilder.codeplex.com/>.

The focus of both redistricting applications is on redistricting. They provide all the functions and information required for building districts and nothing more. They give Floridians two choices with easy and direct access to the same programs, data, and plans that legislators and professional staff themselves use to navigate interactive maps, explore population characteristics, and build districts.

To use the Florida Senate’s District Builder, individuals register for a secure account. To use the Florida House’s MyDistrictBuilder™, individuals do not need any type of account or password. The application is immediately accessible via a link at <http://www.floridaredistricting.org>.

Senate and House professional staff worked collaboratively to ensure common geographic and data characteristics for the two applications. In addition, Senate and House professional staff shared public submissions. Maps, statistics, and downloads for each submission were posted on both the Senate and House Redistricting websites, regardless of whether the plan was drawn using District Builder, MyDistrictBuilder™, or some other redistricting application.

Data Used in Drafting Plans (and source of data)

Senate and House professional staff used their respective web applications as the interface for drafting plans. Both applications included:

- 2010 Census Redistricting Data [P.L. 94-171](U.S. Census Bureau).
- The 2010 Census geography (U.S. Census Bureau).
- Reference layers (e.g., road geography from the Florida Department of Transportation, features in Bing Maps).

In addition, professional staff consulted the following data in drafting plans:

- 2010 Census Summary File 1 Data (U.S. Census Bureau);
- 2006-2010 American Community Survey Data (U.S. Census Bureau);
- Public input (public testimony, public hearings, public redistricting plans submissions, public electronic and written communications);
- Bing Maps, Google Maps, Google Earth and Google Street View.

Users of the House of Representatives' MyDistrictBuilder™ application also had access to the following data:

- 2005-2009 American Community Survey Data (U.S. Census Bureau);
- Florida 2010 General Elections History and Florida 2010 Voter Registration Data (Florida Division of Elections, 67 Florida County Supervisors of Election);
- Florida 2008 Presidential Race Elections History and Florida 2008 Voter Registration Data (Florida Division of Elections, 67 Florida County Supervisors of Election);
- Florida 2006 General Elections History (Florida Division of Elections, 67 Florida County Supervisors of Election);

In both applications, county > voting tabulation district (VTD) > block is the primary hierarchy of Census geography. For the 2010 Census, 9,435 VTDs are nested within Florida's 67 counties, and 484,481 blocks are nested within the 9,435 VTDs.

VTDs are an official layer of Census geography submitted to the Census Bureau by supervisors of elections for the express purpose of fostering efficient administration of elections after redistricting. A block is an area bounded on all sides by visible and/or invisible features shown on a map prepared by the U.S. Census Bureau. A block is the smallest geographic entity for which the Census Bureau tabulates decennial census data. In different ways, both applications allow users to view various other county, city, and geographical boundaries as viewable layers or features. Both applications allow users to assign an entire county, city, VTD, or block to a district with a single-click.

For all layers in the 2010 Census Redistricting Data, the Census Bureau enumerates total population in six independent categories of race, plus a seventh category for Hispanic or Latino. The Census Bureau also tabulates voting age population (18 years and older) for the same categories. The dashboards and most reports used for building plans collapsed the resulting 252 categories to 14 or fewer:

- Total Population;
- Deviation (count and percentage);
- Total VAP (Voting Age Population, 18 and older; count and percentage);
- Non-Hispanic White alone VAP (single-race white, count and percentage);
- Non-Hispanic Black VAP (includes Black alone or in combination with other races; count and percentage);
- Hispanic Black VAP (includes Black alone or in combination with other races; count and percentage);
- Hispanic VAP other than Hisp. Black (excludes Hispanic Black VAP; count and percentage);
- Other VAP (not single-race white nor black alone or in combination nor Hispanic; count and percentage).

The “District Statistics” summary reports in Tab E provide district totals for the following:

- Deviation (count and percentage, calculated as the difference between the total population in the district and the total population of the state divided by the number of districts in the plan);
- Total Population (count);
- Total VAP (count);

- Black VAP (Black alone or in combination with other races—including both Hispanic and Non-Hispanic Blacks; count and percentage);
- Hispanic VAP.

The “VAP Each Racial & Ethnic Group” reports in Tab E provide district totals for each racial and ethnic group in the 2010 Census Redistricting Data [P.L. 94-171] supplied by the U.S. Census Bureau.

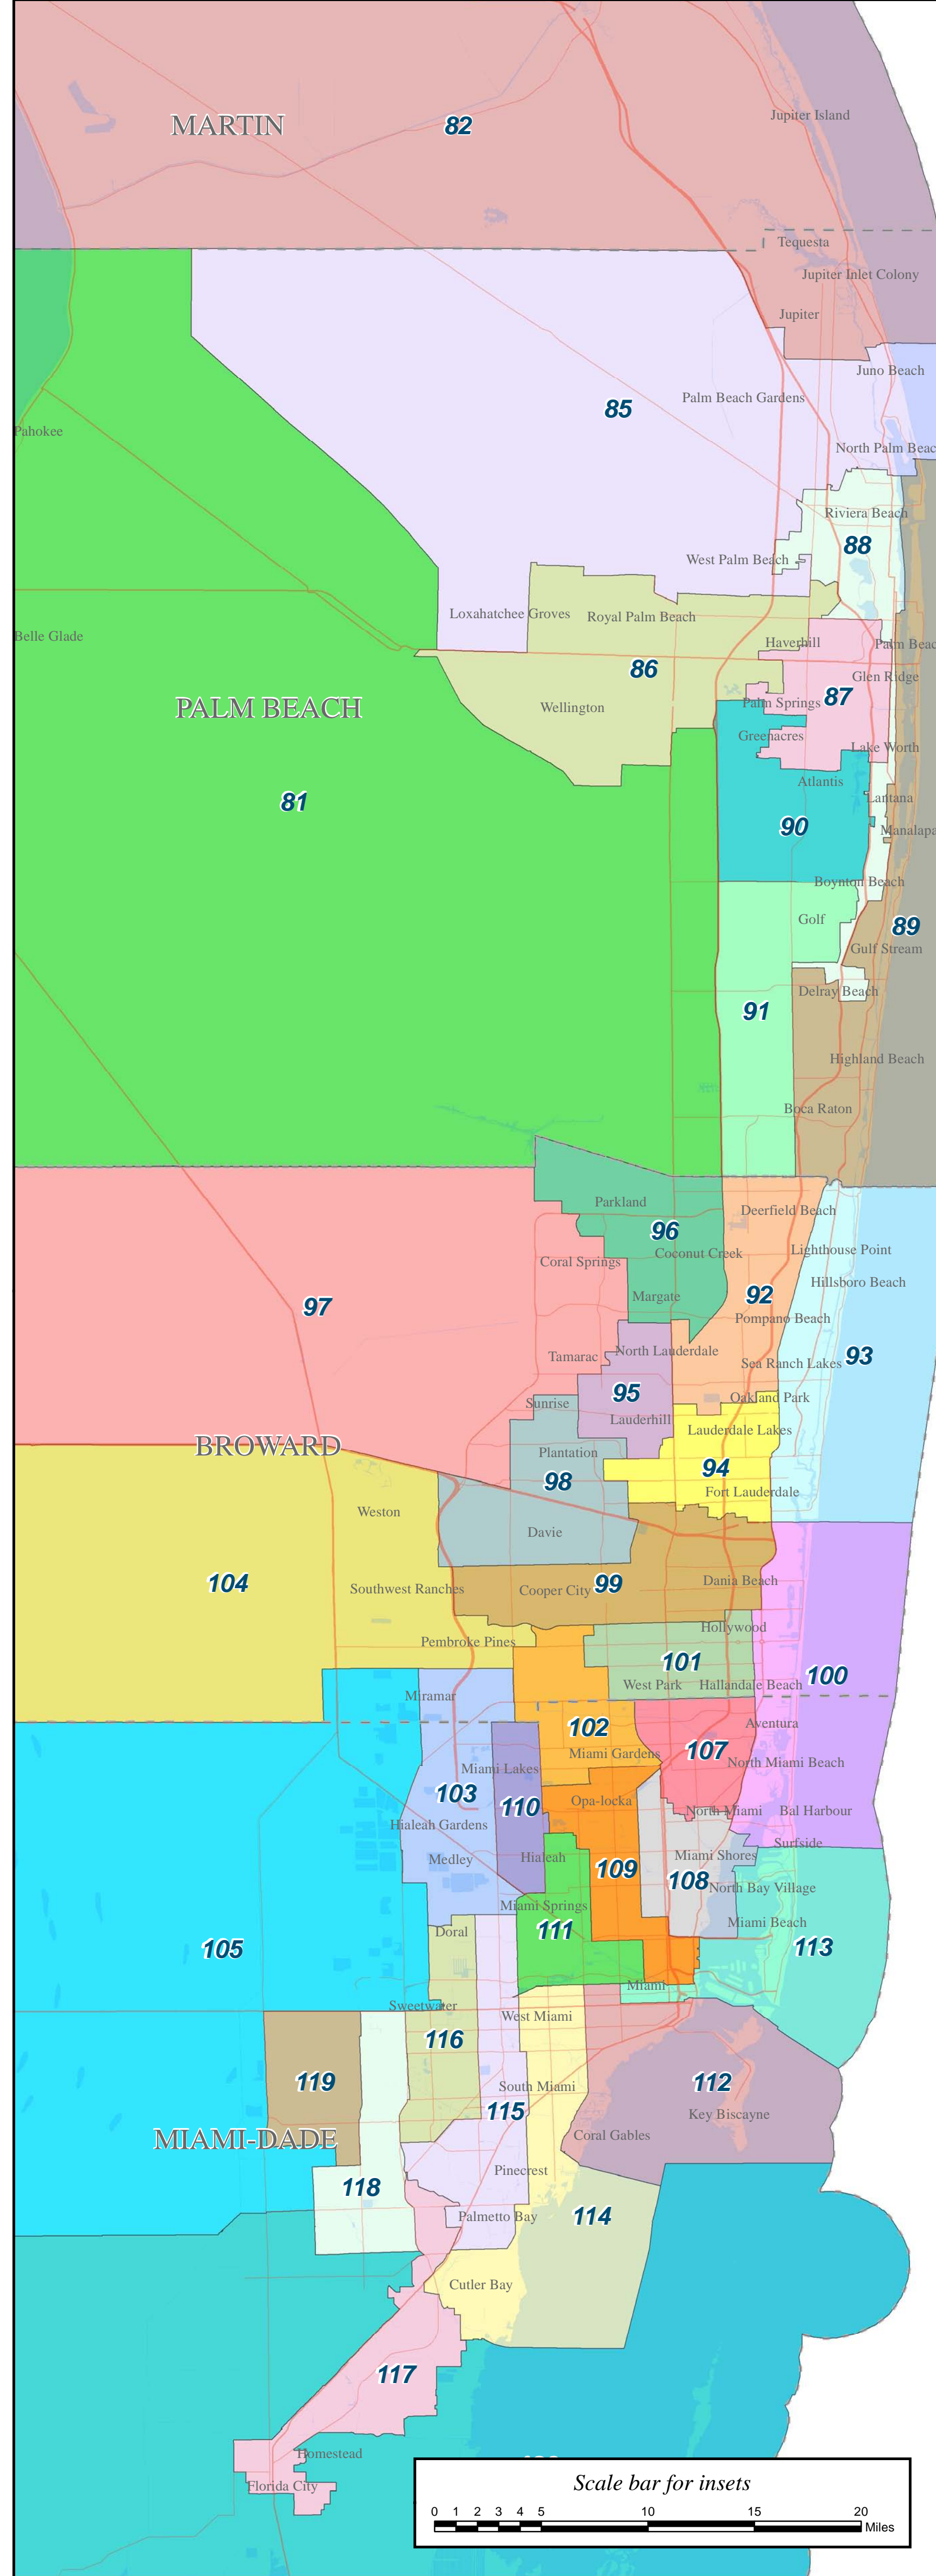

Criteria Used in Drafting the Plans:

The following criteria were used in drafting the apportionment plan:

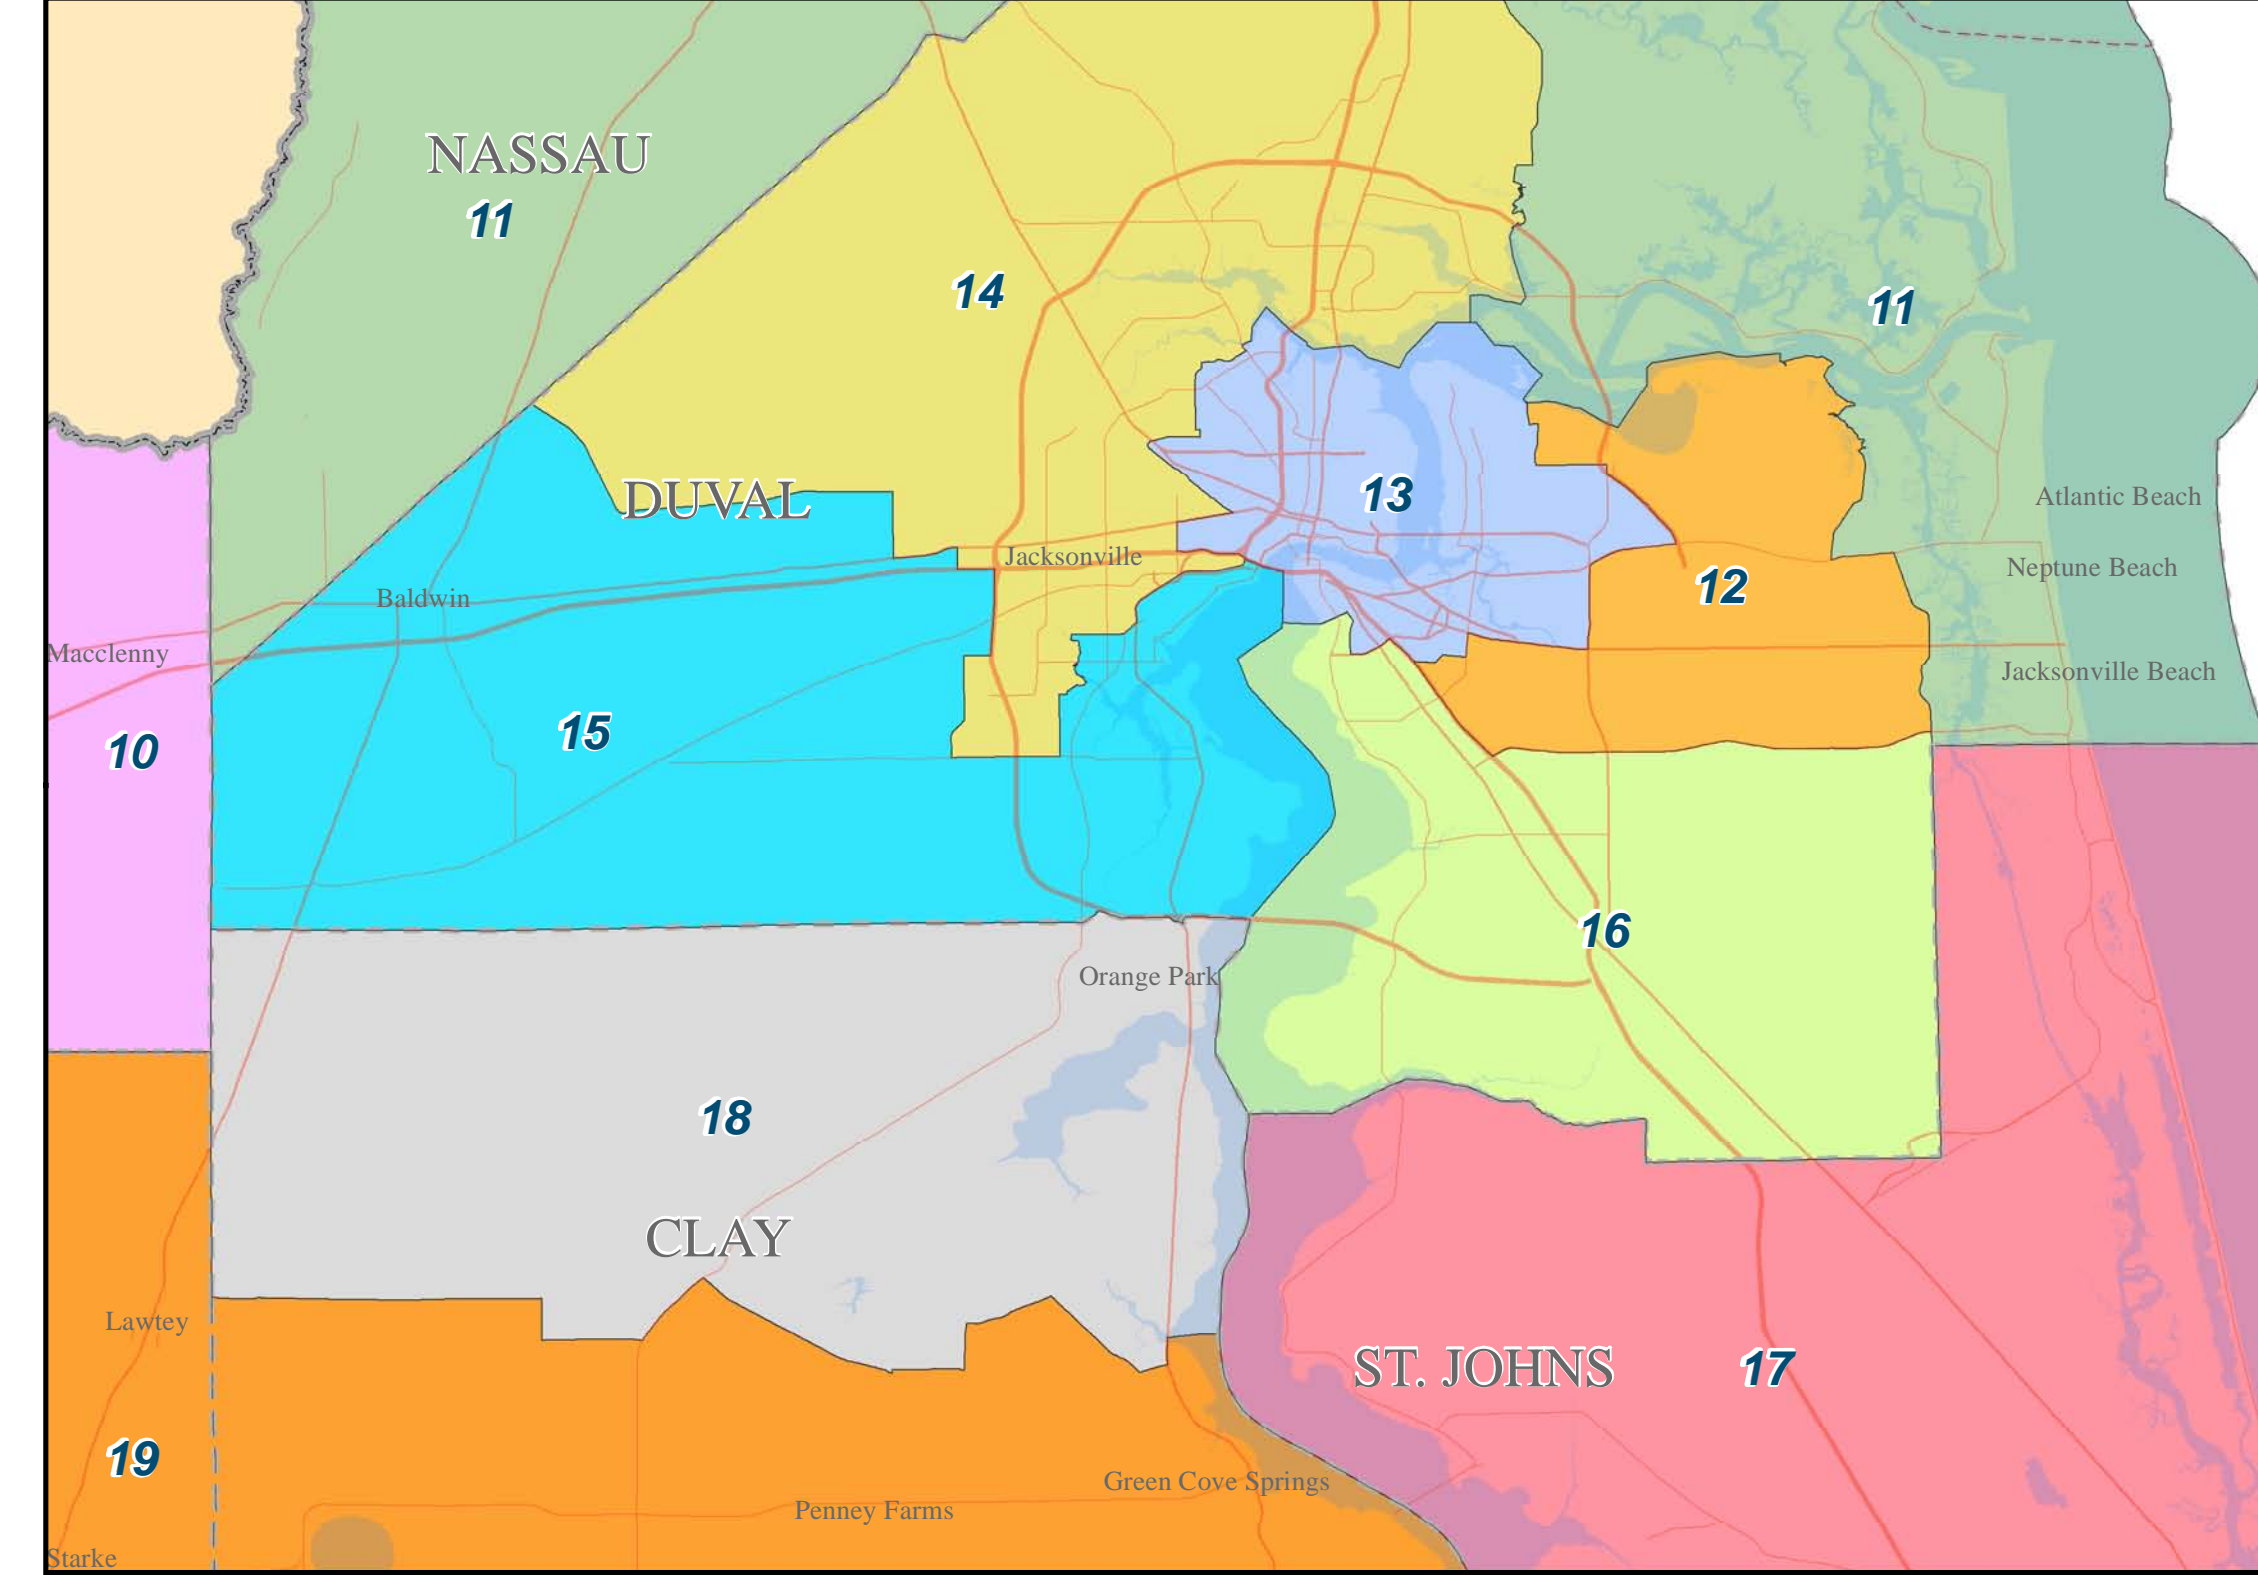

- The Equal Protection Clause of the United States Constitution, including the “one-person, one-vote” standard.
- Section 2 and Section 5 of the federal Voting Rights Act of 1965.
- The Equal Protection Clause and Article III, Sections 16 and 21 of the Florida Constitution.
