STATEMENT OF THE CASE AND FACTS[2]

In 1970, Gordon and Molly Beyer purchased an undeveloped, approximately nine-acre island in Monroe County (County), known as Bamboo Key, for $70,000. The County zoned the island as "General Use" at the time, which allowed for one single-family home per acre. Sixteen years later, the County adopted a Comprehensive Land Use Plan (Plan) that downzoned the island to one unit of development per ten acres. The Beyers did not challenge that plan. In 1996, the County revised its Plan and reclassified the Beyers' property as a "bird rookery." The only permitted use of the property became "temporary primitive camping . . . in which no land clearing or other alteration" occurs. The Beyers challenged this classification in 1997 by submitting a beneficial use application where they properly asserted that the revised Plan effectively denied all economically reasonable use of their property.

Two years later, the City of Marathon (Marathon) incorporated and the Beyers' island became part of Marathon. Neither the County nor Marathon acted on the Beyers' application. Instead, in 2002, Marathon demanded the Beyers submit a new application. They did so. Finally, in 2005, a "Beneficial Use Special Master" finally [2] Unless otherwise noted, the facts in this section of the brief are set out in Judge Shepherd's dissent from the order denying the Beyers' Motion for Rehearing En Banc, available at Ganson v. City of Marathon, No. 3D12-777, 2016 WL 5404070 (Sept. 14, 2016).

heard the case. The evidence showed the Plan enacted by Marathon reduced the Beyers' property's value by at least 98.7% from its original purchase price to $900.

Despite concluding that the plan only allowed camping on the island, which did not amount to "reasonable economic value" to the Beyers "in light of their investment in the property," the Special Master recommended denying them relief because Marathon had "compensated" them by awarding them 16 "ROGO" points. ROGO points—so-called because the names derives from the local "Rate of Growth Ordinance"—purportedly control growth by allocating "points" toward possible purchase of one of the limited number of development permits available.

In response, the Beyers brought an inverse condemnation action against Marathon. They alleged they had "been deprived of all or substantially all reasonable economic use of the subject property." [3] In the judgment on appeal, the trial court granted summary judgment based on laches and on the notion that the Beyers had no reasonable investment-backed expectations when they purchased the island.

The Third District rejected the conclusion that laches precluded the Beyers' claims. See Beyer v. City of Marathon, 197 So. 3d 563, 566-67 (Fla. 3d DCA 2013), reh'g and reh'g en banc denied, Ganson, No. 3D12-777, 2016 WL 5404070 (Beyer II). Nevertheless, the court affirmed. Despite the fact that Marathon did not argue the [3] The court granted summary judgment for Marathon previously; that decision was reversed. Beyer v. City of Marathon, 37 So. 3d 932 (Fla. 3d DCA 2010) (Beyer I).

ROGO points amounted to adequate compensation in their motion for summary judgment, the Third DCA held that the Beyers had no reasonable investment-backed expectations for the property, and that the ROGO points award provided adequate compensation. Id. Thus, the court reasoned, it had sufficient grounds to affirm the trial court on the "right for the wrong reason" theory, also known in Florida courts as the "Tipsy Coachman" doctrine.[4] Both Molly and Gordon Beyer passed away during the long pendency of this case, thus Charles Ganson, Personal Representative for Molly Beyer's Estate (Ganson), brings that decision to this Court for review.

SUMMARY OF ARGUMENT

This Court should exercise its jurisdiction over this significant regulatory takings case because the Third District decision creates an express and direct conflict with established state case law on Lucas takings and expressly misconstrues the Federal and Florida Constitutions. The lower court holds that a local government can regulate private property to an extent equivalent to a classic physical taking, without just compensation, so long as the taking occurs "incrementally over a period of time." Ganson, 2016 WL 5404070 at 1 (Shepherd, J., dissenting from denial of rehearing en banc). That is not the law; this Court should accept jurisdiction to remedy this fundamental constitutional error. Additionally, the decision conflicts with state case law on the Tipsy Coachman doctrine. This issue standing alone provides grounds enough for the Court to accept jurisdiction; when taken together, all the grounds add up to a case demanding this Court's correction.

[4] H. Michael Muniz, Tipping the Ole Tipsy Coachman Over in his Grave, 81 Fla. B. J. 33 (Aug. 2007).

ARGUMENT

DISCRETIONARY JURISDICTION EXISTS BECAUSE THE DECISION BELOW CREATES AN EXPRESS AND DIRECT CONFLICT WITH FLORIDA CASE LAW REGARDING LUCAS TAKINGS

The Third District's decision conflicts with Florida case law regarding total takings—also known as Lucas Takings, after Lucas v. S.C. Coastal Council, 505 U.S. 1003 (1992). The lower court held that because the Beyers did not present evidence that they had a plan to develop their property, they could not complain when Marathon's regulations took all economic use of their property from them without just compensation. Beyer II, 197 So. 3d 563, 566-67 (citing Lucas, 505 U.S. at 1019 n.8) (other citations omitted). That holding confuses Lucas takings with Penn Central takings, Penn Central Transp. Co. v. City of N.Y., 438 U.S. 104 (1978), and confuses the law of Penn Central takings, for good measure.

In Lucas, the property owner purchased two residential beachfront lots later rendered undevelopable by South Carolina's "Beachfront Management Act." 505 U.S. at 1006. He contended that the law extinguished his property's value, entitling him to compensation, id. at 1009, just as the Beyers said about the Plan's effect on their property. The Court in Lucas stated a constitutional rule: "[W]hen the owner of real property has been called upon to sacrifice all economically beneficial uses in the name of the common good . . . he has suffered a taking." Id. at 1019.

The Special Master in this case concluded that "there is absolutely no allowable use of the property under the City of Marathon Land Development Regulations." Ganson, 2016 WL 5404070 at 5. That conclusion fits the Lucas rule and is no different than the property owners' fate in Lucas—the Beyers had no choice but to leave their property in its natural state so that Marathon could use the property as a bird rookery. Cf. Lucas, 505 U.S. at 1018 (explaining that a Lucas taking occurs when regulations "leave the owner of land without economically beneficial or productive options for its use—typically, as here, [require] land to be left substantially in its natural state"). For the Third District to conclude a total taking did not occur conflicts with Lucas. It also conflicts with Lucas progeny cases, including Keshbro, Inc. v. City of Miami, 801 So. 2d 864 (Fla. 2001), where this Court held that a one-year temporary taking of an apartment complex amounted to a total taking, and City of St. Petersburg v. Bowen, 675 So. 2d 626 (Fla. 2d DCA 1996), where the Second District held that a municipal order closing a 15-unit apartment complex for one year as a statutory nuisance amounted to a Lucas taking entitling the property owner to compensation.

A comparison of this Court's decision in Keshbro to the instant case illustrates the conflict. In Keshbro, this Court explained that a total taking under Lucas occurred "where the regulation 'denies all economically beneficial or productive use of land.'" Keshbro, 801 So. 2d at 869 (citing Lucas, 505 U.S. at 1015). Applying Lucas, this Court concluded that a one-year temporary closing of apartment buildings as nuisances amounted to a total (Lucas) taking, even though the taking was not permanent. Here, the facts are worse. The Special Master concluded that all economic use of the property was taken permanently. Based on Lucas and Keshbro, the Third District should have reversed, found a taking, and then remanded the case for a hearing on just compensation, which remains in dispute. This Court should accept jurisdiction to resolve the conflict.

II

THE COURT SHOULD EXERCISE ITS DISCRETION BECAUSE THIS CASE INVOLVES THE TAKING OF PROPERTY WITHOUT JUST COMPENSATION

Nearly one hundred years ago, Justice Oliver Wendell Holmes emphasized that a "strong public desire to improve the public condition is not enough to warrant achieving the desire by a shorter cut than the constitutional way of paying for the change." Pennsylvania Coal Co. v. Mahon, 260 U.S. 393, 416 (1922). Here, Marathon attempted a shorter cut toward improving the public condition—in this case, protecting the environment and wildlife—than the Constitution allows. It did so by destroying the Beyers' ability to economically use their property, without just compensation. Besides failing to apply Lucas and the Tipsy Coachman doctrine correctly, the Third District also misconstrued and misapplied Penn Central, providing this Court another reason to exercise its jurisdiction.

In Penn Central, the Supreme Court of the United States identified several factors that "have served as the principal guidelines for resolving regulatory [Fifth Amendment] takings claims that do not fall within the . . . Lucas rules." Lingle v. Chevron U.S.A. Inc., 544 U.S. 528, 539 (2005). As the Court explained in Palazzolo v. Rhode Island, 533 U.S. 606 (2001), those factors include "the regulation's economic effect on the landowner, the extent to which the regulation interferes with reasonable investment-backed expectations, and the character of the government action." Palazzolo, 533 U.S. at 617. And contrary to the Third District's decision, "investment-backed expectations" do not control the outcome of a Penn Central case. In Palazzolo, Justice O'Connor explained as much when she noted that the lower court "erred [when it elevated] what it believed to be '[petitioner's] lack of reasonable investment-backed expectations' to 'dispositive' status. Investment-backed expectations . . . are not talismanic under Penn Central." Palazzolo, 533 U.S. at 634 (O'Connor, J., concurring).

In improperly elevating the "reasonable investment-backed expectation" factor in a Penn Central case, the Court also mistakenly concluded the Beyers needed to produce evidence of their investment-backed expectations at the time of purchase. Not true. One significant factor that shapes a property owner's expectations is "the regulatory regime in place at the time the claimant acquires the property at issue." Palazzolo, 533 U.S. at 633 (O'Connor, concurring). When the Beyers bought the property, they could build one single-family home per acre, and that informs the understanding of what the Beyers' reasonable investment-backed expectations were in 1970. Further, the requirement that "investment-backed expectations" be reasonable requires an objective—not subjective—evaluation. See Lucas, 505 U.S. at 1035 ("expectations protected by the Constitution are based on objective rules and customs that can be understood as reasonable by all parties involved").

And finally, the Third District wrongly asserted that because the Beyers did assert their rights for years, they forfeited those rights. Not so. In Palazzolo, the Supreme Court held that even regulations passed before the acquisition of property did not necessarily have a detrimental impact on the reasonable investment-backed expectations of subsequent owners who take title with notice. Palazzolo, 533 U.S. at 627. Otherwise, the state could effectively "put an expiration date on the Takings Clause . . . . Future generations, too, have a right to challenge unreasonable limitations on the use and value of land." Id. Thus, the Beyers certainly had a right to challenge the unreasonable limitations put on their use of their land after their acquisition of the property, and holding otherwise misconstrues the Constitution.

III

THE COURT SHOULD EXERCISE ITS DISCRETION BECAUSE THE DECISION CREATES AN EXPRESS AND DIRECT CONFLICT WITH FLORIDA CASE LAW REGARDING THE TIPSY COACHMAN DOCTRINE

Besides the reasons to take jurisdiction described above, the Court should accept jurisdiction to address another conflict created by the Third District when it explained it would have affirmed the lower court's decision as "right for the wrong reason" because the ROGO points the Special Master awarded the Beyers, combined with the camping rights, amounted to just compensation. Beyer II, 197 So. 3d at 566 n.6 ("We affirm, applying the 'tipsy coachman' doctrine, which permits a reviewing court to affirm a decision from a lower tribunal that reaches the right result for the wrong reasons so long as 'there is any basis which would support the judgment in the record.' Dade County Sch. Bd. v. Radio Station WQBA, 731 So. 2d 638, 644–45 (Fla.1999)."). The Third District relied upon Dade County School Board for its holding, but in doing so misapplied Dade County Sch. Bd.

In Dade County Sch. Bd., this Court explained that an appellate court can affirm a lower court decision, even if the lower court's rationale was wrong, as long as the ultimate conclusion was correct. This is called being "right for the wrong reason," and is also known as the "Tipsy Coachman Doctrine." Id. But, Dade County Sch. Bd. does not allow for a summary judgment to be affirmed on grounds not presented to the lower court. See Samiian v. First Professionals Ins. Co., Inc., 180 So. 3d 190, 194 (Fla. 1st DCA 2016) ("Even summary judgment can be affirmed, if right for the wrong reason, where the right reason was adequately presented to the trial court in support of the motion.") (emphasis added and citations omitted).

Loranger v. State Dep't of Transp., 448 So. 2d 1036, 1039 (Fla. 4th DCA 1983), also explains that the "right for the wrong reason" maxim is not available in this context. There, the Fourth District explained that Florida Rule of Civil Procedure 1.510(c) requires the motion for summary judgment must "state with particularity the grounds upon which it is based and the substantial matters of law to be argued." Loranger, 448 So. 2d at 1039. The rule prevents surprise. Id. Here, Marathon did not argue before the trial court that ROGO points plus camping rights were adequate compensation. The Beyers did not even recognize it as an issue until the Third District first employed this dubious rationale to justify its decision. This is an example of the prejudicial surprise Rule 1.510, and Dade County Sch. Bd. and its progeny, forbid. This Court should accept jurisdiction to remedy an error courts will otherwise rely upon to affirm wrongly-decided summary judgments in the future.

CONCLUSION

For all these reasons, Ganson respectfully urges the Court to accept jurisdiction of this case.

Gordon Beyer and Molly Beyer,
Appellants,

vs.

City of Marathon, Florida, and the State of Florida, Appellees.

An Appeal from the Circuit Court for Monroe County, Ruth Becker, Judge.

James S. Mattson (Key Largo); Andrew M. Tobin (Tavernier), for appellants.

GrayRobinson and John Herin and Jeffrey T. Kuntz (Fort Lauderdale) for the City of Marathon; Pamela Jo Bondi, Attorney General and Jonathan A. Glogau, Special Counsel Chief, for the State of Florida.

Before WELLS, SUAREZ and LAGOA, JJ.

SUAREZ, J.

Gordon Beyer and Molly Beyer ("the Beyers") seek to reverse a final summary judgment in favor of the City of Marathon and third-party defendant, the State of Florida, on the appellants' inverse condemnation suit. We affirm.

In 1970, the Beyers purchased the undeveloped nine-acre offshore island, Bamboo Key. At the time of purchase, the property was undeveloped and under the jurisdiction of Monroe County. It was zoned for General Use, which permitted one single-family home per acre. In 1986, new zoning regulations took effect that altered Bamboo Key's zoning status from General Use to Conservation Offshore Island (OS) and placed it in the Future Land Use category,[1] which limited density to one dwelling unit per ten acres. In 1996, the Monroe County Comprehensive Plan ("2010 Plan") was adopted, identifying Bamboo Key as a bird rookery and prohibiting any development. [2, 3] The Beyers submitted their first beneficial use

[1] In 1985, the Legislature enacted a State Comprehensive Plan, effective July 1, 1985, ch. 85-57, 1985 Fla. Laws 295 (codified as amended at Fla. Stat. ch. 187 (2000)). In 1986, the State Comprehensive Plan was adopted by Monroe County. This effectively altered the zoning classification of Bamboo Key from General Use (GU) to Conservation-Offshore Island (OS), which reduced allowable development to 1 unit per 10 acres. The purpose of the OS district is to establish areas that are not connected to U.S.-1 as protected areas, while permitting low-intensity residential uses and campground spaces in upland areas that can be served by cisterns, generators and other self-contained facilities. See Monroe County, Fla., Code § 9.5-212 (1986); § 54 (1987).

[2] See Marathon, Fla., Code § 103.07(B) (2009) (providing that the Conservation-Offshore Island (C-OI) Zoning District shall be used for properties which have natural limitations to development because of their sensitive environmental character).

("BUD") [4] application in 1997. The County had taken no action on the application by 1999 when the City of Marathon was incorporated and assumed jurisdiction of Bamboo Key. The City ordered the Beyers to submit a new application and fee, which they did in 2002. A BUD hearing was ultimately heard before a special master on July 13, 2005. The special master issued an order recommending denial. The special master determined the only allowable use of the property was camping. He concluded, however, that assignment of sixteen points under the City's Residential Rate of Growth Ordinance ("ROGO") constituted reasonable economic use of the property and held a value of $150,000.00. The special master further concluded that the landowners' inactivity over thirty years despite increasingly strict land use regulations restricted any reasonable expectation that the property

[3] The Beyers could camp on the property, but not build. See Marathon, Fla., Ordinance 2004-15 (Jul. 13, 2004); State of Florida, Dep't of Cmty. Affairs Final Order DCA04-OR-189 (2004) (finding Ordinance 2004-15 extending development moratorium on certain high quality natural areas to be consistent with §§ 380.05(6), 380.0552(9), Fla. Stat. (2003) (Florida Keys Area of Critical State Concern)).

[4] The beneficial use determination is a process by which the City evaluates the allegation that no beneficial use remains and can provide relief from the regulations by granting additional development potential, providing just compensation or if it so determines, extending a purchase offer for the property. However, this article also intends that such relief not increase the potential for damages to health, safety, or welfare of future users of the property or neighbors that might reasonably be anticipated if the landowner were permitted to build. Marathon, Fla. Code art. 18 ("Beneficial Use Determinations"), § 102.99(B) (2008).

would hold a greater development value. Therefore, the ROGO points and recreational value reasonably met investment-based expectations. Based on his recommendation, the City passed a resolution denying the petition later that month.

The Beyers sued the City for inverse condemnation based on a per se, facial taking. Their complaint asserted that they have been deprived of all or substantially all reasonable economic use of the property by virtue of the changes in land use regulations over the years. An earlier appeal was taken after the trial court entered summary judgment in favor of the appellees based on the statute of limitations. Beyer, et al. v. City of Marathon, 37 So. 3d 932 (Fla. 3d DCA 2010). This Court reversed the order and remanded the cause for further proceedings upon determining the statute of limitations did not bar the Beyers' claim for an as-applied, rather than a facial, taking. On remand, the trial court again entered summary judgment in favor of the appellees. It concluded that the Beyers had failed to produce any evidence that the change in land use regulations had substantially deprived them of reasonable economic use of the property or frustrated a reasonable investment-backed expectation held at the time of purchase. The trial court also concluded the doctrine of laches barred the Beyers' claim, as their thirty-year delay in pursuing any development had prejudiced the appellees. The Beyers appeal.

Our standard of review on a grant of summary judgment is de novo. Volusia Cnty. v. Aberdeen at Ormond Beach, L.P., 760 So. 2d 126, 130 (Fla. 2000). The existence or extent of the Beyers' investment-backed expectations to develop Bamboo Key is a fact-intensive question. The record before us is devoid of fact evidence that the Beyers had any specific plan for developing the property, dating from the time of purchase in 1970, up to the present.[5] "If the Landowners did not start development prior to the enactment of these land regulations, they acted at their own peril in relying on the absence of zoning ordinances. . . . A subjective expectation that land can be developed is no more than an expectancy and does not translate into a vested right to develop the property." Monroe Cnty v. Ambrose, 866 So. 2d 707, 711 (Fla. 3d DCA 2003) (internal citations omitted); see Lucas v. So. Carolina Coastal Council, 505 U.S. 1003, 1019 n.8; see generally Penn Cent. Transp. v. City of New York, 438 U.S. 104 (1978) (considering the economic impact of the regulation on the claimant, the extent to which the regulation has interfered with distinct investment-backed expectations, and the character of the government action; diminution in the property value alone cannot establish a taking); Shands v. City of Marathon, 999 So. 2d 718, 724 (Fla. 3d DCA 2008); see also Galleon Bay Corp. v. Bd of Cnty. Comm'rs of Monroe Cnty., 105 So. 3d 555 (Fla. 3d DCA 2012) (finding that the trial court erred in its determination that Galleon had not been deprived of all or substantially all of the economically viable use of its property, where the property owner, over many years, proceeded with numerous efforts to improve and develop the land). To be sure, the record is devoid of evidence that – not only at the time of purchase but in all the intervening years – the Beyers pursued any plans to improve or develop the property. They provided no evidence of investment-backed expectations at or since the time the property was purchased, nor demonstrated any reasonable expectation of selling the property for development. We therefore affirm the trial court's conclusion on this issue.

[5] The Beyers submitted a dock permit application in 2000, well after their BUD application was filed. The untimely attempt to show "investment-backed expectations" to develop the property by filing a dock application does not influence the as-applied taking analysis. As the City points out, a dock is an appurtenant structure, and there is no development on Bamboo Key, planned or otherwise, to be served by a dock.

The City and State argue that laches apply because it is now impossible to recreate the circumstances and conditions present on Bamboo Key back in 1996, when the land use designation changed. As there have been no significant changes to the Key since the Beyers bought it in 1970, however, that argument is unpersuasive. Furthermore, as we concluded in Beyer, 37 So. 3d at 934,

> "[o]rdinarily, before a takings claim becomes ripe, a property owner is required to follow 'reasonable and necessary' steps to permit the land use authority to exercise its discretion in considering development plans, 'including the opportunity to grant any variances or waivers allowed by law.' " Collins, 999 So. 2d at 716 (quoting Palazzolo v. Rhode Island, 533 U.S. 606, 620-21, 121 S.Ct. 2448, 150 L.Ed.2d 592 (2001)). In the case before us, the Beyers, in close proximity to the time the 1996 Plan was enacted, sought the quasi-> judicial relief available to them via the BUD process. Based upon the information in the record, it appears that any delay in the processing of the Beyers' BUD applications was not caused by any action or inaction on their part. It would be patently unfair, if not absurd, to allow the county, and later the City, to delay the timely processing of the BUD application, provide a determination after the expiration of the purported limitations period, and then claim the expiration of the limitations period as a defense.

Beyer, 37 So. 3d at 935. The same conclusion applies to a laches defense.

We nevertheless affirm the summary judgment because these facts present a claim for an "as-applied" taking and not a per se, facial taking.[6] The City assigned the Beyers sixteen points under its Residential Rate of Growth Ordinance, having a value of $150,000. The award of ROGO points, coupled with the current recreational uses allowed on the property, reasonably meets the Beyers' economic expectations under these facts. Thus, under an "as applied" takings analysis, the Beyers were not deprived of all economically beneficial use of the property. See Collins, 999 So. 2d at 716.

Affirmed.

[6] We affirm, applying the "tipsy coachman" doctrine, which permits a reviewing court to affirm a decision from a lower tribunal that reaches the right result for the wrong reasons so long as "there is any basis which would support the judgment in the record." Dade County Sch. Bd. v. Radio Station WQBA, 731 So. 2d 638, 644-45 (Fla. 1999).
